BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL NOTE

Dr. Jephtha McKinney was a graduate of the University of Louisiana and a practicing physician of St. Helena Parish. He was married to Adaliza Corkern.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Early correspondence (many to Jephtha from his brother Jefferson McKinney) refers to medical students, medical education, family matters, and health, including outbreaks of yellow fever (Feb. 17, 1854, Jan. 7, 1855, Sept. 11, 1855) and cholera (July 8, 1849, Aug. 22, 1851). Of particular interest is mention of the severe punishment of "Negro" thieves in Texas (Oct. 21, 1849), thoughts on the Know Nothing Party (1855), and the sale of a sixteen year old female slave (April 21, 1856).

Civil War letters (1860-1866) from various family members serving in the Confederate Army reflect camp life, health of soldiers, treatment by civilians, poor provisions, and activities at Ship Island. A letter from James B. Corkern lists the number of men on the Mississippi coast (October 8, 1861) and some letters give eyewitness accounts of military engagements at Port Hudson, Shiloh, and Vicksburg. Later correspondence pertains to Reconstruction, family affairs, children, education, and Baptist churches in Mississippi and Louisiana. A letter from Jefferson McKinney mentions conditions in Rapides Parish in which it was not uncommon for African Americans to be found shot or hanged (December 1873).

Other items include various pamphlets; statements of accounts for medical services; promissory notes; wills; births and deaths of some family members; and a thesis on pneumonia written by Dr. Jephtha McKinney (undated). Printed items include newspaper clippings (1860-1893), a list of the seven professorial chairs and the annual number of the matriculates and alumni from 1834-1872, as well as a list of the professors, lecturers, and demonstrators of anatomy from 1834-1872 at the University of Louisiana.

Manuscript volumes are comprised of diaries; class notes; an account book (1857-1860); medical daybooks; and memoranda books. Among the printed volumes are minutes of the Mississippi River Baptist Association and bulletins from Silliman Collegiate Institute. For a full listing, see container list.
